Foreword

On 25 July 2015 Edinburgh Airport commenced, without public consultation, the trial of a new flight path route, TUTUR.

Following numerous complaints from members of the public I took the decision to conduct a survey of my constituents living within the areas most affected by the flight path trial. The survey was personally addressed and hand delivered to all those on the electoral register living in the towns and villages of Broxburn, Uphall, Dechmont, Bridgend, Ecclesmachan and the Springfield area of Linlithgow. It received an overwhelming response from more than 2000 people, particularly significant when considering that there was no freepost return and constituents had to pay for their own postage.

The objective of the survey was to gauge the following:

- Public awareness of the trial
- Public support for addition of new flight path
- Noise impact and its affect

It is clear from the results that the majority of responders are opposed the TUTUR route, many severely affected by the noise impact from aircraft at low altitudes turning over populated heavily towns.

There are a number of questions outstanding that need to be answered and options exhausted before the TUTUR route should even be given further consideration:

- 1) Is there sufficient credible evidence to support the need for increasing Edinburgh Airport's flight servicing capacity?
- 2) If so, can this be achieved through existing flight path routes?
- 3) If not, are there any other potential routes that would take low flying aircraft over less densely populated areas, particularly south over the Pentland Hills?
- 4) Can existing flight path routes be used during unsociable hours and an alternate route during peak times?
- 5) Will a new flight path route meet the long term needs of the airport to service flights?
- 6) What assessments have been carried out on the environmental impact should a new flight path route be introduced?

The following report gives a detailed breakdown of the street by street results, providing an important insight into the actual real experiences of people across the trial route, the inclusion of which is imperative in the decision making process when considering the viability of any changes to, or introduction of, flight path routes. These are the responses from 2000 people not just two static noise monitors in a small number of sites one of which wasn't ever under the trial flight path.
